

Changing Roles

Spread the Word and Save the Date!

Train-the-Trainer Workshop 2009

Location: Lake Conroe, TX (north of Houston)

Dates: April 23-24, 2009 (Optional Texas Forest Expo on April 25th)

Registration: $150

Lodging: $110/night at La Torretta del Lago

What is Changing Roles?

Changing Roles: Wildland-Urban Interface Professional Development Program provides state and federal natural resource agencies and other organizations with a set of flexible resources to conduct their own training programs, aimed toward building skills and tools to successfully tackle WUI issues. For more information and to view the Changing Roles materials, visit:

www.interfacesouth.org/changing_roles.

Workshop Objectives

At the end of the workshop, participants will be able to:

- Understand why the wildland-urban interface is an important consideration in natural resource management today.
- Use Changing Roles materials to plan and conduct a successful Changing 100
- Roles training workshop for natural resource professionals.
- Contribute to training a staff better equipped to work effectively in the WUI.
- Understand how the formation of interagency training teams can help in the implementation of professional development programs.
- Understand how Changing Roles can complement and be integrated into existing agency priorities and projects.
- Identify positive outcomes of Changing Roles and potential benefits for their state and region.

Who Should Attend This Workshop?

The main target audience for this Train-the Trainer workshop is natural resource trainers or conservation educators who will be able to use these materials to either enhance existing training programs or create a new training. We also encourage attendance by people in leadership positions who can ensure that WUI themes are incorporated into annual trainings.

For More Workshop Information and to Register On-Line Visit:

<http://tfsweb.tamu.edu/conferences/ChangingRoles>

For Questions Contact:

Angie Soldinger, asoldinger@tfs.tamu.edu, 979-458-6649 or Nicole Wulff, nmwulff@fs.fed.us, 352-378-2451

Changing Roles

